manlifts and aerial platforms have become integral and common equipment in industrial settings over the last few decades. These machinery provide an easy way to lift staff close to what needs to be carried out on a stable platform apparatus, enabling employees to carry out tasks with greater safety and comfort rather than being perched on top of scaffolding or ladders.

Like every other device, manlifts are just safe when they are utilized correctly. Since they lift employees above floor or ground level, accidents could occur easily and this could result in serious injuries or death for both the operators of the manlift as well as any passerby who might not be lucky enough to be standing beneath.

There are different kinds of manlifts. The majority fall into 1 of 2 categories: the articulating boom lift, that has the capability of both horizontal and vertical movement and the scissors lift, that is capable of moving upward and downward.
